Oak Creek Welcomes Two New Businesses to Drexel Town Square Main Street

Oak Creek, Wisconsin: The Oak Creek community welcomes two new businesses to its Drexel Town Square. Hand & Stone Massage and Facial Spa and YogaSix will build out space in the Forge & Flare building on Main Street and be open to the public early in the new year.

Hand & Stone Massage and Facial Spa is slated to open at 7945 S. Main Street the first week of February. Offering advanced skincare services and high-quality professional massage and spa services, Hand & Stone Oak Creek will provide guests with the newest technologies at the forefront of the wellness market to enhance each guest's overall experience.

"We look forward to welcoming the Oak Creek community into our doors this winter and introducing our services to our new guests," said Gary Nagra, owner of Hand & Stone Oak Creek. "Our team treasures providing relief and care to each customer, and we are excited to interact with the neighborhood."

YogaSix, a boutique fitness yoga brand founded in 2012, offers a full-sensory and modern perspective on one of the world's oldest fitness practices in a way that is accessible to all levels, empowering, and fun. YogaSix Oak Creek, located at 7966 S. Main Street, is the brand's second location in Wisconsin and is expected to open in late winter.

"As residents of Oak Creek, we couldn't be more excited to bring YogaSix to our community," said Michelle Klein, who owns the studio with her husband, John. "We hope to introduce people to the overall health benefits YogaSix provides by offering a warm, welcoming, and inclusive environment for all who wish to practice, regardless of level or ability."

Sean Phelan, President of Phelan Development and co-developer of Forge & Flare, shares his excitement for these businesses joining the Main Street community.

"Each business offers services that complement our current retailers with a focus on wellness and self-care. Hand & Stone and YogaSix's commitment reinforces Main Street at Drexel Town Square as a destination providing memorable experiences for everyone."

The City of Oak Creek is also pleased that these two unique services will be added to the vibrant mixed-use Drexel Town Square development.

"These businesses are remarkable additions to downtown Oak Creek, and we thank them for their vision and investment. The pace of construction and absorption of space in Drexel Town Square has been nothing short of amazing these last seven years," said Mayor Dan Bukiewicz. "Right now, in what was an 80-acre brownfield development, one lot is remaining for development, at Main Street and Drexel Avenue. The investments made in our community's future, in creating our postcard downtown, was a turning point for Oak Creek. Our future could not be brighter, and small businesses are critical to that continued success."

About Drexel Town Square:

Drexel Town Square is the result of a public-private partnership between WE Energies' development arm, Wispark, and the City of Oak Creek. The development tract, approximately 80 acres in total, was comprised mainly of the former AC Delco/Delphi campus and bordered by Howell Avenue (east), Drexel (north), and Forest Hill (south). The project represented a first-of-its-kind downtown for the City of Oak Creek and features a complimentary mix of large and small retailers, daily convenience services, a diverse residential portfolio, and also civic uses, with a City Hall and Library complex opened to the public in 2015. The "town square" continues to bring outside visitors and community members together through special events and gatherings, including a seasonal Saturday Farmers Market that continues to grow in popularity each year.
